

ADAPTING TO YOUR NEW GLASSES

Putting on new frames for the first time can feel a little weird – but don't fret! Wearing them as often as possible for the next few days will help you adapt quickly.

You may need 1-2 weeks for your eyes to adjust to progressive lenses. During that time, try...

- ...moving your head around often to get accustomed to looking at different distances through the correct lens
- ...reading with your chin up while focusing your eyes downwards

CLEANING YOUR SPECS IS EASY

Simply run them under lukewarm water and rub in a little soap. Rinse, then wipe them gently with a microfiber cloth or let them air dry.

HOW TO ADJUST YOUR GLASSES

Sometimes, even the most stylish frames need a little tweaking to fit right. If your eyewear feels off, try these quick fixes carefully:

Adjusting Your Temple Tips

- First, run your temple tips under hot water
- If your frames feel loose, bend the temple tips slightly downwards
- If your frames feel tight, bend them upwards

Adjusting Your Nose Pads

- Grip your glasses by the lens and nose bridge
- If your nose pads sit too high, push them outwards
- If your nose pads sit too low, push them inwards
